Working Like Dogs Celebrates its 20th Radio Show

Free podcasts offer valuable information about working animals, including service dogs.

Santa Fe, NM—November 1, 2009—Working Like Dogs, the internet radio series on PetLifeRadio.com, has just completed its 20th show. These free podcasts cover everything from how to take care of your companion animal to getting started as a trainer.

Hosted by Marcie Davis, a member of a service dog team for over 16 years and the award-winning author of Working Like Dogs: The Service Dog Guidebook, Davis began the radio show this year to answer the myriad questions she was always being asked.

“People want to know how to obtain an assistance dog, or need information about nutrition, healthcare and retirement to better care for their own dog partners,” Davis says. “The Working Like Dogs podcasts let me provide that information so it’s available to everyone.”

Each week a new topic is presented in the 30-minute shows hosted by Davis and her service dog Whistle. Guests on the show to date have included dog trainers, puppy raisers, veterinarians, representatives from service dog organizations, the leader of a K-9 correctional team, specialists in working dog equipment, and family members living with a service dog team.

Whether you currently are part of a service dog team, or if you just always wanted to know more about the variety of tasks working dogs perform, these podcasts are for you. The topics discussed have ranged from an overview of what assistance dogs do to how to cure doggie breath.

All podcasts are available free of charge at any time, with new episodes added each week. Just visit WorkingLikeDogs.com or PetLifeRadio.com and click on the Working Like Dogs podcasts. Select the topic you want and start listening and learning about working dogs.
